

147 passengers agree to delay flight for heart transplant doctors

By Cui Mengxin

In order to wait for a group of surgeons and nurses with a living heart to fly from Shanghai to Wuhan to perform a heart transplant, all 147 passengers and crew on board flight MU2520 agreed to delay the flight. They waited for 79 minutes at the airport.

On the evening of June 7, a heart donation surgery was performed in Hangzhou, and the heart organ needed to be sent to Wuhan Union Hospital as soon as possible. However, there was no flight scheduled from Hangzhou to Wuhan when the operation was going to be finished. At about 6:00 P.M., Mr. Guo from Wuhan Union Hospital called China Eastern Airline for help, hoping that they could delay Flight MU2520, the last flight from Shanghai to Wuhan that night, so he and two colleagues could take the flight to bring the living heart to Wuhan.

China Eastern Airline immediately decided to delay the flight to wait for Mr. Guo and his colleagues. The ground steward explained the situation to the passengers at the boarding gate, who expressed understanding and support. At 11:20 P.M., Mr. Guo and his colleagues finally arrived at Pudong International Airport and the flight arrived at Wuhan Tianhe Airport at 1:25 A.M. on June 8. The heart transplant surgery started at about 2:00 A.M. and finished at 6:00 A.M. Afterward, the transplant recipient was sent to the ICU and his vital signs remain stable at present.

Kids' basketball championships

On June 10, the second Wuhan Huaxingbei Kids Basketball League was held in the Wugang Gymnasium. Over 300 children from 24 kindergartens in Wuhan participated in the event. After a massive 66 matches, the champions were finally crowned.

Student with tailored portrait postcard

Every student in Class 3, Grade 2013, in the Environmental Design major at Wuhan University of Engineering Science received a hand-drawn portrait postcard recently from their teacher Fan Jingjing. She originally designed these unique postcards as a graduation gift for her students. She drew each student's portrait on the obverse side of the postcard and wrote their nicknames and her best wishes on the reverse side.

College student makes a million writing online novels

By Que Jiancheng

RMB 1.3 million was the "first pot of gold" for Zhang Qidian, a freshman at Wuhan College of Foreign Language and Foreign Affairs who likes writing and has published several novels online.

Born in 1996, Zhang fell in love with writing as a second-grader in primary school despite not yet being able to write many Chinese characters.

In his first year of senior high school, Zhang registered an account on a literature website and began writing his first novel. That novel of three million Chinese characters took one year and nine months to finish, generated more than 1.5 million views, and brought him RMB 300,000 in remuneration.

Even during the period when he was busy preparing for the national college entrance examination, he managed to spare some time to write his second novel, Rebirth: A Perfect Life. In November 2015, Zhang signed a contract with zongheng.com. His high-profile second novel exceeded five million clicks, which brought him a commission of RMB one million.
